My dear Prof. Cocheart

I venture to add my solicitations to those which you have probably already received, to make a favorable decision on the question of connecting yourself with our University. Arguments I will not employ, for I am sure the whole ground has been gone over in your own mind. I wish however to express the personal gratification which I should experience in being able to count you among my colleagues in our Academic Faculty; and I feel that your talented wife whose very daughter character so warmly, would form a valuable accession to our social circles. I learn that my own feelings are participated in by all who have made your acquaintance here. I firmly trust you may decide to become one of our members

Very sincerely yours

Alexander Winchell
